NEW BOOKS

Brief Ecriews of Important and Interesting New Publications.

"On Double Consciousness." by Alfred Binet, is an essay and review concerned with experi-mental psychological studies (The Open Court Publishing Company), Volume 25 of "Alden's Manifold Cyclopedia," just issued, carries the series to the down-grade of the alphabet. It finishes with the thirteenth and lays a broad greep upon the fourteenth letter.

Imbert de Saint-Amand's "Marie Louise, and the Decadence of the Empire," affording in clear and vivid fashion the details of the pleonic story from 1812 to 1814, is admirably translated by Thomas Sergeant Perry (Charles Scribner's Sons).

"Christ in the New Testament" is a series of lectures by the Rev. Dr. Thomas A. Tidbail. etor of St. Paul's Church. Camden, before the Church Weman's Institute of Philadelphia and elsewhere (Thomas A. Whittaker). The leetures sum up the great mass of New Testa-ment criticism and are intended as a handbook for popular use.

Very attractive Christmas numbers of the Lendon Graphic, Pigaro Illustri, Young Ladier Journal, Pictorial World, and other well-known illustrated publications are afforded by the International News Company. The pictures in solor are varied and handsome. They include one of Detaille's spirited pieces showing s squad of cavalry in the act of charging. Well told and charming stories, illustrating various phases of New England character, are afforded by Sarah Orne Jewett in "Strangers and Wayfarers" (Houghton, Mifflin & Com-pany), They are full of interesting perceptious, ingeniously and poetically expressed. "Walford," by Eilen Olney Kirk, a novel whose scene lies in a Connecticut manufacturing town of to-day, comes from the same pub-

"The War in the Crimea." by Gon. Sir Edward Hamley (Scribner & Welford), is a volume in the series dealing with the most important events of the last half century. It contains a full parrative, clearly and well written, and mpanied by portraits and plans. A number of short stories, easy and natural in style and interesting in matter, the work of Mr. J. Ashby-Sterry, are afforced by the same pub-lishers, under the title of "Nutshell Novela."

"Millionaires of a Day: an Inside History of the Great Southern California Boom." by T. B. Van Dyke (Fords, Howard & Hulbert), is explained in its title. The boom reached its high tide in 1887. From his study of this boom the author draws the conclusion that California will be shy of booms hereafter, and will be satisfied with a natural growth. The boom was not a swindle, he says, but a piece of folly merely. The wicked had nothing to do with it only the unstable and enthusiastic. The experiences of an English sailor of the last century, who was caught by the Sallee Rovers and held in captivity among the Moors for three-and-twenty years, afford a curious and interesting volume in the "Adventure Series" (Macmillan & Co.). A notable feature of the book consists of an introduction by Dr. Bobert Brown, in which the reader may find a full account of those famous barbary pirates who used to add so materially to the terrors and dangers of the sea. "The Adventures of Thomas Pellow of Penryn. Mariner." is the title of this narrative. Curious illustrations ompany the curious story. It is all calculated to make us exceeding thankful that the Sallee Rovers are no more.

Novel readers will find an absorbing and delightful romantic love story in " The Snake's Pasa." by Bram Stokes (Harper & Brothers). The scene is laid on the west coast of Ireland. and the heroine, Nora Joyce, is as fine a girl. as sterling in character, as warm of heart, and se good looking, as even the very particular could ask for. The incidents of the tale are many and moving, the style of narration skilful in all its directions. The tragedy of the bog, in which Nora saves her lover and the wicked Murdock comes to a shocking end, is a tragedy ably pictured. Another capable story, from the same publishers, is afforded by Eva Wilder McGlasson in "Diane's Livery." a tale of the Kentucky Shakers. It contains character sketching of a very nice order, and is novel and interesting as well.

George Saintsbury's translation of Prosper Merimee's "Chronicles of Charles IX." with spward of 100 woodgravings from drawings by Edouard Toudouze, makes a notably handone and charming volume. Print, paper, plotures, and liferary quality are all remarksbly fine. The publishers (Cassell Publishing Company afford, too, a volume of much interast in "Curlous Creatures in Zoology," an acsount by John Ashton, with 130 accompanying illustrations, of those amazing inhabitants of earth and sea and air, which the ancients ensountered frequently enough, if we may be-lieve their historians, but which have kept very persistently out of the way of the moderns we mean, of course, the harpies, sirens, griffins, delphins, satyrs, gorgons, and so forth. Mr. Ashton explains them all, and points out their existing descendants. They are a highly las-

The " Seventh Annual Report of the Bureau of Statistics of Labor of the State of New York." being the report for 1889, is contained in a single volume, compact and well arranged.

It is a work of importance and interest and one very creditable to Commissioner Charles F. Peck, Chief Clork Edward J. Kean, Mr. William Humphreys, and the others who have been concerned in its preparation. Commissioner Peck presents tersely and clearly, in an introduction, a review of the results accom plished by his department in the investigation of strikes during a period of five years begin aing in 1885. The investigation covered 884 distinct trades and industries, and involved visits or written application to 11,052 industrial establishments. In the five years there were 9.384 strikes in the State, of which 5.866 were successful. Of the whole number, 3,888 were for increase of wages, and of these over 70 per cent were successful. The volume sums up and presents in tables and other forms al sorts of information regarding the strikes lockouts, and boycotts for the five years under consideration, such as forms of manifestation causes, results, and cost to both sides.

The story of Grace Bellassys, daughter of Col. Bellassys and niece of Lady Amelia Ros con who eloped—the niece, not the sunt—from a conventual school at Boulogne-sur-Mere, climbing out of a window by means of a rope ladder at 1 o'clock in the morning, and running off to sea with her cousin. Herbert Barclay, son of Sir Herbert Barelay, the distinguished engineer. in the young man's yacht, the Spitare; of the great storm which the Spitfire ran foul of in the English Channel and which was within an ace of sending that spick and span little craft and her people to Davy Jones's locker; of the rescue of the cloping pair by a merchantman bound to New Zealand; of their consequent great embarrassment, and the wedding which finally resulted, the Captain of the merchantman tying the nupital knot, as British laws permit a British Captain to do upon the high seas when circumstances seem to call for it: all this story is told with inimitable vigor and skill by that master of sait water fiction, Clark Russell, in "A Marriage at Sea" (Lovella). It is a stirring and terrifying tale indeed, and we do not doubt that any coupl contemplating an elopement by water will, upon reading it, reconsider their intentions. and clope upon a railway train instead.

Those who have seen the great l'ubinstein at work at the keyboard will agree that the written story which he affords of his career has little of the picturesque whiri and emphasis mark ing his musical performances. Still his "Auto-biography." translated from the Russian by Aline Delano (Little, Brown & Co.) acquaints as with a number of interesting things. Rubin-stein, who was born at Vichvarianeiz, a village on the Dniester, in 1820, gave his first public concert in Moscow when he was nine years old. He remembers that he was absorbed in music at that age, but is not certain that he had mastered the alphabet. At 14 he was put upon a table and careased by Alexandra, wife of the Emperor Nishalas. It is possible he would have wen a fortune by his precocious skill had it not been for the unfortunate circumstance that

ris." ruler of the most unmusical people on the globe, according to his rating, and other hon-ors, gratifying if not bankable. That they did not amount to a bank account of any importance is apparent from the fact that he was soon afterward very hungry in Vienns, where he wrote music and tried to sell it, and was very grateful to the great Light for inviting him to dinner. It may have been a mark of his gratitude that he imitated Lists. holding his hands and tossing back his long hair in the same manner. It was in 1846-7 that he hungered in Vienna, and that Liszt opened to him the elysium of soup and roast and strong cheese and pudding. After that for several years Rubinstein was a teacher of music in St. Petersburg in a private way, and then greatness came to him in the shape of the directorship of the Conservatory. His famous American tour, made in 1872, he describes as tedious but profitable. He was a slave, despising himself and his art, but the material prof-ita, $40,000, were the foundation of his prosperity. They placed him beyond the necessity of coming to America a second time, and enabled him to refuse point blank an offer of $100,000 to repeat the tour. Germany, Rubinstein says, is the head of the musical world, spite of the disagreeable fact that she is eaten up with pride in her patriotism, her pietism, and her sense of superiority to all nations. Fifty per cent. of the German people understand music, against sixteen per cent, of the French and two per cent, of the English. Even Americans, the great performer says, have a higher appreciation of music than the English.

THEIR MARRIAGE A FAILURE.

Dr. Merrow and His Bride Part With Hard Words and Blows,

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 28 .- Dr. J. G. Merrow of the Medical Institute was married a month age to Miss Fannie Burgess, but to-night his Last night Mrs. Morrow remained with her mother, and early this morning she came back. brandishing a big batchet. The indignant husband locked the office door at the front of his residence, and the young wife. In her anger, smashed in the panels and then attacked her husband with the sharp instrument. Doctor, though he weighs 300 pounds, dedged the blows and finally secured the hatchet. Mrs. Merrow to-night gave her version of the affair by saying:

"When I first met my husband I was. like many foolish girls, deceived by his show of money, horses, and diamonds. He admitted that he had not been the best man in the world, but assured me that he would reform and live a life that would be pure and hen orable. After marriage he forbade me from seeing or corresponding with my mother or relatives, and intercepted all my letters. I found that everybody shunned me though he had said I would gain in social position by marrying him though he had said I would gain in social position by marrying him. He admitted to me that he was not a real physician. But only practising a scheme to make money. A few days ago he told me that he was agoing to sell out and go to New York, where he would buy a hotel at No. 42 Carmine street. It was not a highly respectable place, he said, but that made no difference while we made money. I refused to go with him as I was told that he intended to keep a disreputable place and put me as mistress. He threatened to force me to go, and I called a carriage and went to my mother. The poor old lady had been heartbroken at my marriage, and received me with open arms. This morning I returned to secure my dresses, and he would not let me in. I selzed a hatchet which lay on the floor and hammered on the door. After I had broken through several panels he opened it, and I took what I wanted. I would not live with him another day for a fortune."

Dr. Herrow was seen this morning and said: "My wife cams to me last night and demanded sloo, and as I had given her money a day or two ago. I refused. She grew very angry and said she must pay ber dressmaker and other bills. She believed I wanted to gat rid of her and asked if I would give her 31,000 if she would leave and never trouble me arain. I said I didn't marry her expecting she would here was fire in her eye, and I told ber to remain away e else come back alone. There was fire in her eye, and I told ber to remain away et she come back alone. Then she found a hatchet and broke in the door, which was locked, saying she would have her things anyhow. I finally opened the door and let her in, and one or two blows were aimed at my head before I could get the highest and to-day his household and office furniture.

LITIGATION OFER A PHIVATE BEWER.

About $150,000.000. BBIDGEPORT, Nov. 28.-It is not often that persons representing $150,000,000 appear before the courts of Fairfield county over such a little thing as a private sewer, but this was the case on Wednesday morning. The parties to the suit were William D. Rockefeller, President of the Standard Oil Company; Mrs. Eliza beth L. Milbank, widow of Mr. Milbank, who was a controlling power in the St. Paul Rail-road during his life, and A. Foster Higgins. another millionaire, all of Greenwich. years ago they jointly agreed to build a pri another millionaire, all of Greenwich. Two years ago they jointly agreed to build a private sewer to run scroes their several properties. Mrs. Milbank went to Europe after the sewer was surveyed, and while she was gone licokefeller and Higgins, it is alleged constructed the sewer, but upon different lines on Mrs. Milbank's estate than she one first settled uron. The course was changed on account of engineering difficulties, which would have involved a greatly increased outlay.

When Mrs. Milbank returned she refused to pay her share of the cost, and ordered Rockefeller and Higgins to discontinue the use of the sewer through her land.

This they not only refused to do, but they brought suit against Mrs. Milbank to compel her to pay her proportion of the expense. In support of their claim they testified that Mrs.
Milbank's son authorized the change in the course of the sewer, but Mrs. Milbank insists that her son had no authority to regresent
her in the matter. Rockefeller and Higgins still continue to use the sewer, and Mrs. Milbank sake for an injunction restraining them from using any portion which lies on ber property. Judge Robinson, before whom the case was brought decided that the case was not properly on the short calender list, and it was ordered back upon the regular docket.

A Speck in a Bridgeport Tenement.

Barnogroup, Nov. 28.-The upper portion of 40 Fulton street, in this city, is haunted, and all the efforts of the bright young newspap men of this city have falled to drive away the spook. Two years ago a man and his wife to he were living in the tenement began a flerce fight in the presence of James Brown, who was visiting them. It was 11 o'clock at night, and the row becoming warm. Brown was frightened, and, lifting a window, jumped out. He landed on his stomach on a sharp picket fence,
the pickets going completely through him. He was taken off dead. Brown was dressed in his nightshirt when he jumped. Since that time the rooms have been occupied by many families, all of whom have been driven out by the shoet of Brown. At 11 o'dlock each night, if lamp is burning on that floor, it goes out, and the form of Brown, dressed in his nightshirt,
and with the ho as made by the pickets plainly visible, parades through the apartments. The face of the spock is plainly discernible, and it wears a look of fright.

RONALDS'S CASTLE BURNED,

A Magnificent Residence Breeted in Con-NEWTOWN, Conn., Nov. 28,-A few years ago P. Lorillard Ronalds. a wealthy Scotchman came to Newtown and began the erection of a grand residence on one of the highest hills back of the Grand Central Hotel. It was World, with its high towers, stone walls, mont, gates, court yard and draw bridges. The place had been completed, and the interior finish was of regal magnificence. Grand paintings, statuary and costly ornaments were lavished on the Ronalds home. Shortly after 7 o'clock on the Bonalds home. Shortly after 7 o'clock this morning fire was discovered on the second floor of the castle, and before aid could be summoned the whole place was a mass of flames. The fire was caused by an overheated pire which ran to class to the woodwork. The Fire Department of Newtown was powerless. The configuration raged until afternoon. The loss can only be roughly estimated, but it is certainly not less than $100,000. Only a very small amount of the contents was saved. Bonalds is a relative of the Lorillards of tobseco fame, and is immensely wealthy. Mr. Ronalds and his family salled for Europe last Saturday to winter in the south of Italy, where he has a winter home.

Small-pox on the Vega.

The steamship Vega, which arrived vester. day from Lisbon with Portuguese immigrants. was detained at Quarantine because Maria Virgar, 5 years old, had small-pox. The child was removed to North Brother Island. The vessel was fumigated, and probably will be permitted to come up to her dock to-day. The steamship Rhyniand, from Antwerp, was also detained because of sickness aboard.

A Fast Eastward Trip for the Normannia. The twin-screw steamship Normannia of the Hamburg-American line finished a remarkably fast run to Southampton from this port on Thursday, despite high seas and stormy winds. Her time was 6 days 17 hours and 5 minutes. She landed her passengers and mails in London in 6 days and 20 hours.

A RICH PROGRAMME. 1891 1891

In fiction there will be Kirk Munroe's serial, "Campmates: A Story of the Plains," which will be continued until the 20th of January, 1801. This will be followed by a charming story, called "Flying Hill Farm," by Sophie Swett, with illustrations by Alice Barrier, and this in turn by a notable work by Howard Pyle, entitled "Mon of Iron," illustrated by the author. Besides these, there will be two short serials, namely, "The Moon Prince," by R. K. Munkittrick, and "Yellowtop," by Annie Bronson King. Short Stories will continue to be one of the most attractive features of the magazine. Among others will be "Kittykin," a story of the war, by Thomas Nelson Page; "Butterflyflutterby and Flutterbybutterfly," by W. D. Howells; "The Wonder Child," by Halmar Hootth Botesen; "A Cruise in a Soap Bubble," by Edwin Lassetter Byrner; "A New Year's Dinner Party," by Nora Peinry: "Dick of Diamond Rock," by J. MACDONALD OXLET; "The Boy from North Jericho," by Sophie Swett; "The Singing Mause," by Hezeriah Butterswort, "Corporal Pops," by Capt. Chas. King, U. S. A., &c. There will also be a series of illustrated articles on Our Principal Colleges, by recent graduates of Harvard, Yale, Princeton, &c. Other Interesting contents will be "Travel Notes," by Sophie Elepsoe Herrick, "The Mariper's Compass," by W. J. Henderson; "Taxidermy, by Prof. W. T. Hornaday of the Smithsonian Institute; "How English Literature was Made," by Christine Terrune Herrick; "Lawn Tennis," by O. S. Campbell, Champion of the United States; "Gymnastics," by Roland Nichtneux (two articles." How to Fit up a Gymnasium," and "How to Become a Gymnast".
